Transition and the people behind it

SWS Image & Place : Zushi, Japan

Anish Katikar

While going to the beach to surf and enjoy the water I came across the construction happening along the beach side. Getting to look at the construction happening and the people building it was quite a coincidence as I could only encounter it because i was in zushi in off season.

These shacks are constructed and deconstructed every year due the seasonal weather changes.

I can't wait to see the full transformation of the beach. From a construction site to place filled with busy bars and restaurants.
